New York City DWI Lawyer

Most people who are arrested for drunk driving (DWI), which includes Driving While Intoxicated or Driving While impaired by Alcohol or Drugs, in New York will be shocked to discover that if your breathalyzer reading is over a .08% or if you refuse to take a breath or blood test, your license will be immediately and automatically suspended - even before a trial is held to determine your guilt or innocence. If you possess a commercial driver's license, different laws and penalties apply to you. Being that your livelihood and career may depend on your driver's license, it is imperative that you hire an attorney immediately.

After your arrest for drunk driving (DWI), work on your defense must begin right away. You should have an attorney who will begin to fight to get your license back, retrieve all police paperwork in connection with the arrest, investigate the accuracy of the breath or blood tests that may have been administered, prepare evidence to convince a court to grant you a temporary (hardship) license, contact the NYPD to begin proceedings to recover your seized vehicle and, if you refused a breath or blood test, prepare for a "refusal hearing" which will occur 15 days after your arrest.

Sullivan & Brill, LLP has spent over 10 years dealing with thousands of criminal cases, many involving drunk driving cases (DWIs). Sullivan & Brill, LLP offers free initial consultations to anyone in Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens, Staten Island, Nassau County, Suffolk County, or Westchester County who needs or has a loved one needing a tough and experienced New York City DWI attorney. Sullivan & Brill will protect your rights, fight to maintain your drivers license and driving privileges, and question the truthfulness of the police officer's paperwork, testimony, and chemical tests like the Alco-Sensor and the Breathalyzer.
